TRAPS AND TRAILS DON’T MIX

Dedicated to creating a safe & humane environment for people, pets & wildlife through education & trapping regulation reform.

www.wyominguntrapped.org
DID YOU KNOW?

- IN WYOMING,
  - If you see wildlife, there could be traps. Trapping is allowed almost anywhere on public lands except for National Parks, The National Elk Refuge in Jackson, and a few other areas defined in Wyoming Game and Fish regulations.
  - Traps can be legally placed directly on public trails, including popular hiking trails with no restrictions on numbers of traps. There are no setbacks.
  - Hike with Caution! Warning signs in trapping areas are not required.
  - Trappers are not responsible for any injuries to your trapped pet.
  - Trapped animals can be held in traps for up to 72 hours in leg-holds and up to 13 days in conibears (quick-kill traps) or snares. It is illegal to tamper with or remove animals from a trap.
  - Furbearer trapping season is Oct 1 – April 30. Trappers target furbearers such as badger, beaver, bobcat, marten, mink, muskrat and weasel.
  - No license is required to trap predators. Red fox, wolves, coyotes, jackrabbit, porcupine, raccoon, skunk, or stray cat are classified as predators and are trapped year round.

To learn more about our mission, about trapping or to donate to Wyoming Untrapped please visit our website:

www.wyominguntrapped.org